POLLI:NATION PROJECT

Greenfields is taking part in the Polli:Nation project to help protect the dwindling population of Britain's pollinating insects. Over the next three years, as one of the schools selected for this UK-wide project, we will try to transform our outdoor spaces into more pollinator-friendly habitats.

Miss Smith is leading the project and has already made a start by developing raised beds for the children to grow fruit, vegetables and herbs. To help keep the weeds down and get the soil ready for spring seed sowing, Miss Smith would like to cover the raised beds over winter, so if you have any carpet remnants or rugs that you don't need any more, please see Miss Smith - she would be delighted to take them off your hands and make good use of them.

FINALLY . . . JEANS FOR GENES

Thank you to all those children (and staff) who came to school today wearing their jeans to support 'Jeans for Genes' day. Together we raised almost £250, which will be sent to the 'Jeans for Genes' charity to help to fund research into childhood genetic disorders, such as Cystic Fibrosis.
