ENVIRONMENTALLY FRIENDLY GREENFIELDS

Last Wednesday, Caron Henderson from the Woodland Trust came into school to talk to the children about how we can all be more environmentally friendly and try to protect our environment.

She told the children a story called 'The Man Who Planted Trees' all about how a shepherd turned a wasteland area into a beautiful forest full of nature. The moral of this story is that we need to look after our environment and the trees, because they are home to so many creatures and animals, as well as providing vital oxygen for us to survive.

This links in with the work that has been going on in our outdoor spaces this week, which has included planting more trees.

We are also working towards the Woodland Trust 'Green Tree Schools Awards' that recognise schools for completing environmental projects and encouraging outdoor learning.

We earned our Bronze Green Tree School Award at the start of the year for the work that we are doing to look after and protect our environment.

We are now very close to achieving our Silver Award and we'll keep you updated on our progress with this later this term.
